Buchanan was especially proud of two companion exhibitions which were drawn from the Museums' permanent collections Impressionist Paris: City of Light and Japanesque: The Japanese Print in the Era of

ROBERT ALEX JACKSON

Deceased 2024-01-12 Age 71

Robert A. "Bob" Jackson passed away at his lower South Fork residence this last January 12th 2024. Bob was born to C.D. and Jean T. Jackson in Oak Ridge, Tennessee December 24, 1953. Upon graduation from Litton High School in Nashville, Tennessee, Bob attended Tennessee Tech where he received his undergraduate degree in geology. His keen intellect pushed him to pursue a master's degree in geology from New Mexico Tech, which he attained in 1978. Bob's passion for geology, combined with a sense of curiosity for life, matched him up perfectly for precious metals exploration. He worked for ARCO and Anaconda Minerals

CLASS of 71

Companies, traveling the world in search of gold, silver, and copper mines. This work took him to nearly every continent, which included exotic places in Indonesia, South America, Africa and Australia. His wife and the “demons” (their dogs) set up homes in Bakersfield, San Francisco, and Denver. In 1994 they moved for the last time to Cody, Wyoming. Locally, Bob worked for Cowan Construction and Paul Campbell when he was between exploration contracts. He was also a member of the Cody Lions Club and the Cody Racquetball Club. His career instilled in Bob an appreciation for the outdoors, and this manifested into a lifelong affinity for backpacking, which included annual trips with his old college friends and brother-in-law. He enjoyed fishing and stayed active by playing racquetball for most of his adult life. Bob was an avid reader and lifelong learner, and was always on the lookout for some new research project. For those of us who were fortunate enough to break through the veil of his somewhat unique exterior, we got to enjoy a man with an eccentric wit, a wealth of geological and worldly knowledge, and a solid traveling companion. He loved all kinds music but mostly preferred the blues, and at times a misguided infatuation with funk. He had an exquisitely refined palette, but was as comfortable making delicate pot stickers for a large dinner party, as he was cooking good old Sunday morning southern biscuits and gravy for himself and the demons. The last few years were a bit of a struggle for Bob. He often lamented to his friends about his inability to jive well with people in general. However, all of the friends and family that were close to him took this personal description of himself with a grain of salt. For they all knew the man who loved to advertise an awkward exterior, which was vastly overshadowed by his caring soul. Bob is survived by his sister Kay Gilbert of Denver, Colorado and nephew Colin Gilbert. There will be no formal services. The family only asks that you remember Bob the next time you are sitting around the campfire, listening to BB King, or playing at little “RB”.
